6 Submitted for orders

K Subba Rao who is said to have passed the Secondary School Leaving Certificate Public Exams as the 3rd for the Province in the previous letter of the Dept has also obtained only 284 marks like 3 other Candidates He has obtained however more marks in the School than the other 3 Candidates But the boys did not study in the same School and it is ~~not desirable~~ known for the School marks Can be taken into account in selecting Students for this Scholarship In English Composition however K Subba Rao has got only 36 marks while the other 3 Candidates have got more marks in that subject as noted in the Dept list in pencil

7 Another point for consideration is whether the both the Matriculation and the School Final Exams Could be Recognised for the purpose of these scholarships are only the School Final Examn. The D.P.I. has Recommended a scholarship to Venkatramayachari who has passed the Matriculation Examn in the first class but does not state whether any other Candidates have passed the Matriculation in the first class and if so whether they have applied for special scholarships & submitted for orders with the linked file Re the question of empowering the Govt to grant such scholarships

1) I understand there are three 1st class matriculates please put up the Govt Gazette containing the results

2) Is any rule necessary?

9 The Resp[t] Genl has recommended the five scholarships to be awarded to (1) two students who passed the Matriculation in the First Class and (2) to three others who are holders of S S L Certificates in the order of merit both regard to the latter, judged either by the marks of the public Exam alone or by the combined Exam & school marks, the recommendation is in order and may be sanctioned

10 Now that the School Final Scheme has replaced the University matriculation exam[n] some changes are necessary in the rules governing these scholarships I believe that students of first schools are discouraged, if not prohibited, from going up for the University matric[n] Exam[n] & even if that is not the case it is not desirable to encourage a multiplicity of Exams

11 Out of the 5 scholarships one may be given by preference to 1st class matriculates if there are any of the other 4 to persons who have gone through the School final course thus in practically the determination proposed this year

12 As regards the School final men some rule are necessary to decide the order of merit The DI has sent up a list of total marks obtained by the candidates recommended for scholarships but I am in the absence of a complete list showing the total marks of all the Candidates who have been declared eligible for a College Course, I am not in a position to say ~~that the last candidate is entitled~~ how the order of merit has been arrived at -

13 Taking the marks of the Candidates published in the gazette I find that there are several candidates (among the small number whose marks I totalled up) who have obtained a total higher than the candidates now recommended for Scholarships I give some examples -

			Total marks
14	Regr no 108	B A Krishnasamy	343
	190	L Raghavachar	321
	91	B Krishnamurthi	308
	371	Vamana murthi	331
	113	BS Krishnasamy Rao	303
	336	C N Subba row	319
	445	Kumarasamy	341
	502	Rangachar HS	314

Perhaps there are some more of a similar kind

15 It is not clear from the G.O. letters why the cases of these candidates have not been taken into consideration, for what reason those recommended have been regarded as having stood higher in order of merit

16 One reason might be that some of the candidates have taken more subjects for the exam than others & perhaps the marks in only a certain number of subjects have been counted to decide the order of merit If this is a correct surmise, is it a fair course to follow? Why should not a boy get greater credit for showing ability in a larger number of subjects than another boy who confines himself to a few subjects? It might be fair to give the marks obtained in a subject if the marks are very low & indicate only a superficial smattering knowledge of the subject, but why should actual general proficiency be penalised

17 Then, again, in going upon the school marks it is not clear whether the marks given in the Hy list have been moderated in any way Some schools are liberal in valuing everyday work & others strict.

18 These are some of the difficulties that arise in selection & some clear rules, instructions are necessary when

These are laid down the actual award of the Scholarships every year may with advantage be delegated to the Dy of Edn

19 One other point should also be made clear viz whether an applicn should be made by each boy claiming to be qualified ~~whether the Edn~~ as soon as he joins a college or whether the D/ will select the Scholars without an such applcn The former course would be better

20 If the Govt approves, the D/ Edn may be consulted accordingly -

Page 5 Para 11	11 The suggestion that one of the five scholarshi may by preference be given to a first class matricul provided there is one, is not acceptable as it is opposed to the principle of the introduction of the School Final Scheme Last year on account of the School Final Scheme having been introduced after the commencement of the school-year some justification may be found for giving a scholarship to a matriculate this year In the future years the scholarships should in my opinion be restricted to only those who obtain the School Final Certificate]
Para 12	The order of merit was fixed by taking the aggregate marks gained in the public examination out of a maximum of 500 marks the marks prescribed for two compulsory and three optional subjects
Paras 13-16	13 The candidates mentioned in para 14 have ta en six or more subjects It will be noticed that 343 out of 600 is less than 289 out of 500 A candidate taking an extra subject gains his marks out of a larger maximum There should be no objection to his marks being reduced to the standard maximum for comparison with the marks of other candidates The adoption of this course does not affect the present recommendation
Para 17	14 The marks given in the list have not been moderated in any way Owing to the unsettled nature of the class marks at the present stage it is undesirable to attach any great importance to them They may be used as has now been done to decide between candidates gaining the same number of marks in the

The recommendations for these scholarships invariably come from the Principals of the two Colleges after the admissions are made There is therefore no need to invite any applications direct from the boys None of these scholarships are awarded to students joining any of the outside Colleges
